

Editor's Note: "Bribery" of the senate is generally considered a relic of the past. In this, the third instalment of a senator's story of the senate, he insists a new form of "bribery" has sprung up—"propaganda gone mad." In this article it is revealed in striking fashion how a senator feels regarding the tremendous amount of propaganda which is daily directed against him.

CHAPTER III.

Washington—"Propaganda has gone mad and it is driving other senators and me mad."

In these words, the senator, continuing his story of the inside workings of the senate lays bare the new form of "bribery" which has sprung up in the senate.

"I have never been offered one dollar in way of bribery since I entered the senate," the senator said, "but many, many attempts have been made to buy me and sell me."

"I must confess that at least one of these attempts succeeded."

"This very day they are trying again—those good people back home who elect senators because they are supposed to be men above bribery or corruption of any kind. And then those same good people weep and cajole and tempt and bribe their senators into voting the way they want them to vote. They do it with their little votes."

"Today, they are trying to bribe me by promising me support when I come up for re-election, some time hence, if I will support a certain bill. In groups, by organizations and as individuals, the highly moral folk of my state are trying to bribe me with their votes to vote for that measure or against it just as their point of view dictates."

"They figure I am ambitious in sticking in the senate. A soft life in Washington at $7,500, a year plus mileage, is my price, they feel. They would be astounded if they knew I regarded their letters and telegrams as just so many attempts at bribery. But stop a minute and consider."

"It was sent down here to represent the sovereign will of the people—of my own state in part and of the whole nation. I cannot know that will, in many cases, unless the people express it to me somehow. Hence it is perfectly legitimate for them to write me letters favoring or opposing certain legislation and urging me to vote for it or against it."

"But suppose one of them came to me and said: 'Senator, I want you to vote for this particular bill, and if you do, I will give you $1000. If you don't, I will foreclose the mortgage I hold on your farm.'

"And suppose I should say in reply: 'All right, I will do as you wish. Suppose that should be found out, what would happen? That citizen and I would go to jail, in disgrace and everybody would condemn us.'

"But the citizen thinks it's all right to write me that if I don't vote for the bill he and his friends will foreclose on my political career, while if I do vote for it, they will keep on voting for me. The whole evil lies in the citizen's attempt to coerce me."

"That happens steadily. I am sick to death of it. I do not know how to combat it. No matter how I vote on an important measure, I appear to be yielding to the bribery of one side or the other. They say these are the days of propaganda. Propaganda has gone mad, and it is driving me and other senators mad. It is going to drive some of us out of public life. That may be small loss, but I just want to suggest to the good people who, innocently enough, threaten and cajole their senators that way, to consider that they are inevitably laying the foundation for worse sorts of bribery."

"They are putting the price of a senator too low. One of these days, it will get down to the point where it can be reckoned with in actual money, and then, look out. Liberty."

THREE MEN HURT WHEN AUTO HITS UNLIGHTED WAGON

Horse is Killed After Accident on Greenville Road During Night

Three young men were slightly hurt and a horse was injured so badly that it was necessary to put it to death in a collision on the Hortonville road, about a mile west of Greenville, shortly before midnight. The injured men are Leland Kimball, Lawrence H. Harry Heigh, Appleton, and Robert Briscoe, White lake. Kimball was cut about the hand. Heigh's legs were cut and bruised and Briscoe was hurt about the face. William Winslow, Hortonville, owner of the horse, was not injured. The automobile, which was wrecked, was rented from August Johnke, Superior, who conducts a livery.

Failure of Mr. Winslow to carry a light on his wagon is blamed for the accident. The young men were returning from New London and were coming down a hill when they crashed into Winslow's wagon. The accident occurred in the middle of the road but both car and wagon was thrown into the ditch. One horse was so badly hurt that it was shot.

The injured men were brought into Appleton by other automobiles passing shortly after. Their hurts are not serious.

It is said vandals stripped the wrecked automobile of many of its parts after the accident. Mr. Johnke said Friday morning he was on the trail of the thieves.

"LADIES' NIGHT" IS BIG SUCCESS

Hi-T members found out at their "ladies' night" party in the Y. M. C. A. Wednesday evening that presence of girls make a difference in the enjoyment of a social event. Each was there with his best girl, making the attendance 36.

Uneasiness at being in the presence of the gentler sex was dispelled by a clever mixer. The girls were placed in one circle and the boys in another facing each other. Each girl had a card on which was written a topic she must discuss with the person facing her. The circle was shifted each half minute until each young man and young lady had met. David Bender and Albert Timme were voted by the girls as the best talkers.

The social hall emitted weird sounds when the game of "scrambled kisses" was in progress. Four groups hunted all over the place for candy kisses previously hidden. None could be touched on discovery until the leader of the group was informed by the animal call assigned such as the braying of a mule.

Harold Finger, costumed as a member of the "nut" family, carried on a monologue for 20 minutes. A couple then staged a honeymoon trip, donning apparel from a suit case during a race. The entertainment closed with showing of the motion picture, "Under Four Flags."

Chamber Of Commerce Wants Blanks Monday

Monday is the last opportunity the people of Appleton and vicinity will have to answer the chamber of commerce questionnaire relative to the city's needs. The replies will be received up to Monday evening and the information then will be compiled for use of standing committees.

A varied program is due to be adopted by the chamber from the questions and suggestions which are arriving daily. Everything that is possible of accomplishment or reasonable will be undertaken as fast as committees can study out the project.

It is the hope of Secretary Hugh G. Corbett that every person who has not filled out a blank like one printed below will attend to this duty as a citizen at once and mail the clipping or leave it at the chamber of commerce or Post-Crescent offices.

It will be possible for the chamber to judge more accurately the wishes of the people if the response is large. Mr. Corbett says. Many of the activities which might be carried out for the good of the city do not come to the attention of the chamber until the person who has the idea in mind will impart the information. Every suggestion, no matter how huge or how small the task, is given due consideration.

Voice your needs before the opportunity has passed by. Clip the blank below today.

VOICE YOUR VIEWS ON APPLETON'S NEEDS BY ANSWERING THE QUESTIONS BELOW

1. What do you expect the chamber of commerce to do for the promotion of your line of business or activity?

2. What in your opinion as a citizen is the thing of first importance to be done for the community as a whole?

Mail or leave this blank at the chamber of commerce office, Oneida-st., or at the Post-Crescent office. No signature is required.

All autists who are uncertain as to whether their headlights are of proper focus may have them adjusted free of charge at the demonstration, it was announced.

The club will stage an automobile parade between 3 and 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon to arouse public sentiment for safe and sane driving. An old wrecked automobile will be placed on a truck as an evidence of reckless driving. Boy Scout burglars have been asked to take part in the parade.

COOPERATION of the chamber of commerce, fire and police board, Trades and Labor council and the Wisconsin Industrial commission is claimed by the Silver Star club which aims to cut down reckless and careless driving by controlling thereckless drivers and educating the careless ones. The club's procedure is to communicate personally with the offenders when reported and to push prosecution after the warning is disregarded and the offense repeated.

GO TO LIBRARY FOR PRACTICAL GARDENING BOOKS

Now is the Time to Start Planning for That Supply of Green Vegetables

If you haven't spent several hours of this balmy spring weather standing in your back yard wondering what to plant here and what there, you have missed half the fun of the coming of spring. Everywhere home-owners are planning their gardens, whether they be large vegetables ones or merely borders of bright colored flowers for the grass plot in the backyard.

Cleaning up the yard looks like an awful job when you start, but it is fun in spite of the backache which may follow it. That many Appleton people are hard at the clean up process is shown by the interest taken in gardening books at the public library. The collections contains many books on general gardening and treatises on special kinds of vegetables. The Garden magazine is the only one which deals exclusively with garden subjects, but practically all of the woman's magazines have been devoting some space to the subject of flowers and vegetables.

MANY BOOKS AVAILABLE

The First National bank has issued a little pamphlet on shrubbery planting which gives many practical suggestions concerning the planting of city lots. The booklet is illustrated with pictures of well planned yards in Appleton. Paul O. Nyhus was editor of the booklet, while Prof. F. A. Aust, landscape architect of the University of Wisconsin and Mrs. A. H. Thurer, landscape architect of Appleton helped with the material.

The following is a partial list of the books available at the public library on gardening:

Cabbages, cauliflower and allied vegetables, from seed to harvest, by C. L. Allen.

Manual of Gardening, a practical guide to making of home gardens and of the growing of flowers, by L. H. Bailey.

Garden-making suggestions for utilizing home grounds, by L. H. Bailey.

How to Make a Flower Garden, a manual of practical information and suggestions, by L. H. Bailey and others.

Celery Culture, by W. R. Beattie, Book of Market Gardening, by E. L. Castle.

Studies in Gardening, by Arthur Clutton-Brock.

School and Home Gardening, a text for young people with suggestions and helps for teachers, club leaders and organizers, by K. C. Davis.

A Woman's Hardy Garden, by H. R. Ely.

Garden and its development, by Dr. Paul Falkenberg.

Beginners Garden Book, a text for the upper grammar grades, by Al. French.

Vegetable gardening, a manual on growing vegetables for home use and marketing, by S. B. Greer.

Squashes, how to grow them, by J. J. H. Gregary.

New Creations in Plant Life, by W. S. Harwood.

Six "National Weeks" To Be Observed Next Week

Maybe you think that there are still only 52 weeks in the year, but how can you compute them when there are six weeks in one as there will be next week? The week beginning May 1 is National Baby Week to be celebrated in all the stores handling baby garments in the United States by special attention to babies' needs and with small gifts for small babies. Beginning the day before, Children's week is to be celebrated by special programs in the churches and community which will draw attention to the great need for religious education and supervision of children.

And in the stores there will be columbine week, lago week, and bicycle week, each with appropriate displays and efforts to bring that product before the public. Besides these, next week is to be Truth in Advertising week to demonstrate and emphasize that the great trend of merchandising at the present time is to sell goods upon their merits.

National Gingham week has been celebrated in all the dry goods stores this week with colorful displays of this material which has been coming out of the kitchen and out of the school room for several years. With the perfection of the material itself and the intriguing plaids and small checks which have been displayed, no woman can be well dressed without her gingham from near the top of her clothes list for the spring. The displays have included ready to wear dresses as well as the material and the patterns and trimmings with which to make them into charming and practical creations.

THREE SCHOOLS FOR BOY SCOUT LEADERS

Appleton Boy Scout leaders may avail themselves of either of three summer courses to be given at Culver, Ind., Notre Dame university and Northwestern university. H. B. Buck, scout executive announced.

Catholic scoutmasters, assistant scout masters, and committee men will have special advantages in the 10 days course that is to be given the early part of June. Those taking this course will be in position to visit the South Bend camps. The course at Culver, Ind., will be from July 19 to 30. It is open to all and affords the particular advantage of the woodcraft school. Another course will be given August 21 to 31 at Northwestern university under the direction of the Methodist church board of Sunday schools.

As a member of churches may organize troops this fall, it is suggested by scout officials that these bodies send young men to these schools where they may receive valuable training for leadership.

Full Representation from Appleton is Wanted at Washington Meeting

Secretary Hugh G. Corbett of the chamber of commerce is endeavoring to muster a delegation of at least eight people to attend the national convention of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in Washington, D. C. May 15 to 18. Two delegates already have been named, but the chamber is entitled to four delegates and four alternates.

Enough certificates to grant all delegates fare and a half for the round trip have been received and may be used by any member and his wife, if they will make the trip representing the chamber. Time is granted from May 11 to 21 in which to use the reduced fare.

"We are anxious to have all the representation we are entitled to," said Mr. Corbett. "Any business men who are going east at that time and will attend the convention will be given all privileges accorded delegates. I hope several will give me their names before the above dates."

"Moon" Mash Is Dumped On Side Of Road

Let moonshiners beware! Outagamie-co. farmers threaten to form a pitchfork brigade and conduct organized vigils in search for certain persons who make a habit of dumping their poison mash on road sides. Public highways may be a convenient place at which to leave the "evidence," but farmers are vitally concerned over the loss of life to their stock that the waste mash may cause. Quantities of corn mash and lemons are frequently found on North Oneida st., outside the city limits, and on the Mud-creek rd.

THE INDUSTRIAL MOVEMENT

The National City Bank of New York discovers that the manufacturing industry of the United States, which began along the Atlantic coast, is slowly moving toward the interior of the country where fuel and the bulk of manufacturing materials are produced. Fifty years ago, two-thirds of the nation's manufactured articles were produced in the eastern strip beginning in New England and extending from there down into Florida. Now that district produces less than half of the country's manufactured goods. Each year the percentage of manufactured articles produced in the east grows smaller. What will this lead to? It is an easy question to answer. The interior of the United States—the middle west—is destined to be the great manufacturing center, as it now is the center of production of raw materials, especially food.

Most of the gain in interior manufacturing has occurred in the Mississippi Valley and the states around the Great Lakes. Ohio, for instance, turned out $749,000,000 of manufactured goods in 1910. In 1920 this had increased more than six-fold, to $5,100,000,000. Michigan, largely due to its giant auto industry, made the greatest advance, its output of manufactures increasing from $320,000,000 in 1910 to $3,466,000,000 in 1920. Wisconsin will in due time show the industrial development of Michigan.

Two things have caused the westward movement of manufacturing. Both have to do with economy. The first is the desire to save expensive freight hauls by turning raw materials into finished goods close to the localities where the raw materials are produced. The second cause of the shift of manufacturing is in land values. Manufacturing attracts congested population, which automatically increases land values. This increases manufacturing costs as well as the cost of living of employees. Manufacturing is moving to the interior of the country. Similarly, and perhaps a more important movement, the tendency is for factories to get out of the great centers and into the smaller cities or even into the open country, where land is cheaper and rents lower for employees.

A third cause will operate to build up the mid-west industrially in the future. It is the St. Lawrence waterway, which when built will furnish this great producing section cheap water transportation to the markets of the world.

HELPING EACH OTHER

The new city administration has started its work with assurance of hearty cooperation of the chamber of commerce in all its efforts for development and betterment of this community. The joint meeting of city officials with directors of the chamber Wednesday evening indicated a willingness and desire to work together.

It might be well that meetings like the one Wednesday evening be held more often than once a year. These gatherings give aldermen wider visions of city problems and acquaint leaders of the chamber of commerce with difficulties which confront city officials. They make for closer acquaintanceship and a clearer understanding of each other's motives and problems.

There is no reason why the city council and the chamber of commerce should not work together for the good of the city. It is too much to expect that they will always agree on what is good for Appleton but when there is a disagreement they can get together, discuss their differences and in the larger council arrive at an understanding which will be fair to every interest in the city. Both organizations have the welfare of Appleton as their major work. Frequent conferences will assist both in reaching their common goal.

SPORTS AND CHARACTER

Although it may be true that sport is exaggerated to more than an incident of education, it would be injudicious to minimize its intellectual, moral and physical advantages. It is not only that sport is necessary as a means of relaxation and diversion to students, but even more particularly is it beneficial as a character builder.

John Mohardt, the celebrated back of the Notre Dame university team, who is now a member of Ty Cobb's Detroit baseball club, took occasion to say this week that baseball requires more intelligence than football, which may be developed quickly by an expert coach to remarkable efficiency. Football is team-work, with the coach as the director. Baseball, on the other hand, calls for individual initiative, instant decision and action.

Team-work is something to which everybody should become accustomed. It is a principal feature of most large businesses. Companies which employ many thousands of persons depend considerably for success on cooperation among the individual units. Team-work in sport habituates the players to subordinate their personal interests to the common cause. The players strive for team victory.

Baseball trains the player to study plays and combinations, to observe closely everything that is going on, to look for the weaknesses of opponents, to evolve strategy, to think quickly, and to coordinate thought and action. It teaches self-reliance.

All lines of sport train players to discipline, to endurance, to determination, and to fair appraisement of opponents. Ideas that contribute to molding character and equipping students with qualifications for success in life's occupations are acquired in sport. There are some practical essentials which cannot be absorbed from books or lectures, but which must be learned by demonstration. Sport develops essentials.

THE LOW COST OF HIGHWAYS

Thomas H. McDonald, chief of the United States bureau of public roads, calls attention to the fact that last year this nation spent one and one-tenth cents a day for every man, woman and child on highway improvement. It is a small sum, when one considers what good roads pay in comfort, travel, distribution of food, education and pleasure.

There are present plans for improved highways connecting county seats all over the country. When completed, they will make between 180,000 and 200,000 miles of highway. The federal government is aiding in this construction under a federal law which requires each state to pay half the cost of its own improvements and to enforce adequate inspection and maintenance. So far, it is reported, the states are paying more than half the cost.

Four dollars a year is little enough to pay for such important work, and the public is grumbling less about road taxes than any other. It might even rejoice at paying such taxes if every dollar went into proper construction for service and durability and if inspection and maintenance were actually kept up as they should be.

A third cause will operate to build up the mid-west industrially in the future. It is the St. Lawrence waterway, which when built will furnish this great producing section cheap water transportation to the markets of the world.

Since 1900 there has been some reduction in the per capita eating of meat due to vegetarianism, perhaps, though it is likely that this factor is negligible. There has been considerable progress in the manufacture and preparation of meat substitutes and of substitutes for meat by products, particularly lard. This has had its influence. But the principal reason why America buys less meat per capita is because America can't afford to buy more.

CHILDISH DISEASE PHOBIAS

A vacuum cleaner is a handy little thing to have about the house, but it doesn't worry the microbes of disease any at all, tho the silly salesman enumerates the hordes of disease germs his machine will remove from the prospect's abode. White enamel, nickel plate and plate glass are all pretty enough in a butcher shop or a Greek candy store, but put not your trust in these adornments—look in the cellar or under the counter or under the fingers of the person who handles your food. Theatrical harshness did for a time feature even the furnishings of the hospital operating room, and one so unfortunate as to be dragged into the average "modern" hospital encounters far too much glare and glitter in lieu of cleanliness right now. But, friends, take it from a doctor with a reasonable familiarity with germ ways and a wholesome respect for the wild tribes all such trappings are not to be deemed in any way preventive of disease. It may be that impervious smooth surfaces and rounded corners are easier to wash with soap and water than uneven or over decorated woodwork, for instance, and square corners—but that doesn't give us a single excuse for plate glass, white enamel or nickel plate, in operating room, lavatory, bath, sick room, kitchen or candy store.

We don't absorb any germs thru breathing—the air almost everywhere is practically germ free, and it by reason of floating dust some few germs are breathed in on dust particles, as a general rule these are perfectly harmless bacteria.

No known disease is spread thru the air. It was imagined, long before the actual causes of the infectious or epidemic diseases had been found, that some vague "miasma" arose and permeated the atmosphere around and about the patient ill of a communicable disease—and the ignorant, superstitious people even believed this "miasma" of floating virus carried for hundreds of miles in some instances, even across the seas: This seems ridiculous now, of course, but it was the serious belief of the doctors less than a hundred years ago.

Disease germs can go only where they are carried. They can't travel of their own activity.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Baby or Booby?

We have a fine healthy robust baby three years old and he still insists on having his milk from a bottle when going for a nap or to bed at night. Late he seems to be acquiring the affliction of stomatitis. His lips are larger than ordinary and he keeps his mouth open most of the time....

Answer—An infant should be taught to take milk from spoon or cup at the age of one year. Prolonged use of the bottle is injurious from several points of view. It favors maldevelopment of the face, jaws, palate, teeth and nasal cavity. At least it does not make the child less likely to acquire speech defects. To say the baby "insists" on having his bottle is merely a confession of indifference about his training. The bottle must be suddenly withdrawn and not again offered, tho the baby may refuse all other food for 24 hours or even longer.

Old Maid in No Danger

I'm an old maid of 40 and in my occupation I am brought in contact with women's dresses many of which are filthy with perspiration, so that I have refused to handle such garments until they have been cleaned, and some of my fashionable patrons pool-pooch this idea and assure me I am tatty about it. Please inform me whether such clothing can carry any disease or whether I can be infected in any way by handling and working on it.—Old Maid

Answer—Aside from Pediculus corporis, Pediculus capititis, Pediculus pubis, Cimex lectularius, and maybe Sarcopeltis scabiei, all of which "company" may be entertained in the most fashionable circles, I doubt that you assume any risk in handling or working on such clothes. Yet you are certainly warned in asking patrons to have their clothing cleaned before bringing it for repairs.

Afflicted With a Boil on His Coffee

Is the use of Blank coffee (which comes powdered and is dissolved in boiling water) less harmful than coffee made by boiling the beans? Having a hyper-acid stomach, I find Blank coffee the only kind that does not upset my stomach.—(H. L. N.)

Answer—Coffee should never be boiled. Coffee should be freshly and finely ground just before making. Let the coffee powder stand 15 to 30 minutes in cold water, then add some egg white, stir up well, and allow to heat. Let water the pot and snatch it from the fire just before boiling point is reached, and serve promptly, pouring the cream in the cups first. This assures the finest flavor and prevents the extraction of tannin, which is the only objectionable thing in coffee moderately used by adults.

There is no reasonable doubt that Mr. Wilson expressed the sentiments attributed to him in the Petersburg, Va., PROGRESS AND INDEX APPEAL, believes, but it holds that "Mr. Tumulty went too far in seeking to have quoted as a message to the diners a sentence which the president uttered in private conversation." This likewise is the opinion of the Savannah PRESS (Dom.), which believes that too great importance has been attached to the incident, and points out that Mr. Tumulty "has not always been discreet in his defense of the president and probably has not been justified in assuming to speak for the president authoritatively since the latter's illness. But there is no doubt about his loyalty and affection. He would be the last man in the world to put Mr. Wilson in an embarrassing position."

The real significance of Mr. Wilson's disavowal of the message," suggests the Cincinnati TIMES STAR, "lies not in the substance and manner of previous Wilson utterances, but in the repudiation of Mr. Wilson as spokesman. It is as if both 'Man Friday' and Boswell had lost their jobs. Has Joseph P. Tumulty joined the innumerable hosts that have passed on and out of Mr. Wilson's confidence? Or is it possible that Mr. Wilson, in the multitude of books that are being published, has not yet got round to 'Joe' Tumulty's

Daily Editorial Digest

(Title Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.)

Resume of American and Foreign Newspaper Opinion

MR. WILSON—AND MR. TUMULTY

Stirred regret is expressed by the majority of the editors of the country because former President Woodrow Wilson felt it necessary to openly rebuke his ex-secretary, Joseph P. Tumulty, because the latter has "assumed" to speak for him in the now famous message to the Democratic club dinner in New York. Naturally there is some sarcasm displayed while the purely political comment is framed more from the viewpoint of the editor's "creed of political faith" than from analysis of the merit of the subject.

The fact that the message was interpreted as a "boost" for former Governor Cox's political fortunes generally is held to have been the motive behind the letter of repudiation. And then, "being an author has its advantages," as the New York TIMES (Rep.) points out, "but it makes a practical politician soft. Literary methods will not work in politics—especially in Democratic politics. Mr. Tumulty is learning this to his cost." And, because of the importance attached to the message, it is the opinion of the Roanoke TIMES (Dem.), Mr. Wilson was "left no recourse but to correct the impressions made although doubtless he would have preferred to let the incident go by without correction." But the fact that Tumulty quoted his former chief without authorization hardly warranted the open repudiation in the viewpoint of the Tacoma, Wash., LEDGER (Ind.), which contends that "Joe has been doing that very thing for a decade or more without drawing a fire of resentment."

The Knoxville SENTINEL (Ind. Dem.) declines to agree that it was a desire to frown on Mr. Cox's candidacy that impelled the latter. "His rebuke of Tumulty had no reference to, or prejudice of the Cox candidacy for president," it suggests. "It merely means that Mr. Wilson is not to be put in the position of a partisan for any particular democratic aspirant." Yet, anyhow, that is "beyond the question" in the opinion of the Birmingham NEWS (Dem.), which points out that "the most interesting angle of the affair is that Mr. Wilson finally has broken with Tumulty while to the eye of the Portland OREGONIAN, the letter "confirms the opinion formed from his withdrawal into absolute silence on public affairs that Mr. Wilson considers his public life definitely ended and is determined not to write or speak a word to influence government or politics."

"It was a brutal turnabout even coming from the icy-veined former president," in the opinion of the St. Paul DISPATCH (Ind.), "but politics is a personal juggernaut."

This latter suggestion finds no response from the Wichita BEACON (Ind.) which believes that his sharpness is due to his broken health and suggests that "regardless of the bitter partisan spirit and antagonism which he cheerfully courted when he was in full vigor of his career, may the days deal more gently with him as they pass."

Because Mr. Wilson never was a politician is the very reason why he should not have been quoted as he was, the Jacksonville METROPOLIS (Ind. Dem.) contends and adds "the sooner Woodrow Wilson is treated as an institution—an institution that personifies all the dearer ideals of the American people—and dismissed from political consideration, the better off both parties will be."

There is no reasonable doubt that Mr. Wilson expressed the sentiments attributed to him in the Petersburg, Va., PROGRESS AND INDEX APPEAL, believes, but it holds that "Mr. Tumulty went too far in seeking to have quoted as a message to the diners a sentence which the president uttered in private conversation." This likewise is the opinion of the Savannah PRESS (Dom.), which believes that too great importance has been attached to the incident, and points out that Mr. Tumulty "has not always been discreet in his defense of the president and probably has not been justified in assuming to speak for the president authoritatively since the latter's illness. But there is no doubt about his loyalty and affection. He would be the last man in the world to put Mr. Wilson in an embarrassing position."

"The right hand slope, about 70 degrees to the right of the perpendicular, is the normal slant of writing. Any deviation from this slope marks the tendency to abnormality, or the mental excitations of the over-developed faculties."

Ex-President William H. Taft writes the right slope normally. This assures us of his well-balanced mind, in the first place, and it also tells us he is affectionate, kindly, considerate and good-natured.

Taft writes the round hand. It denotes constructiveness and order. It also signifies strength, deliberation, clearness of conception, good judgment, coolness, steadiness, thoughtfulness and a practical, patient, and resolute character.

It is not unusual for talented persons to join the strokes in their signature with one continuous sweep of the pen. Taft lifted his pen once in making the capital "I" but otherwise the connections are continuous.

The graceful, original manner of his connections is what counts here; it denotes logical reasoning powers. It implies that he has a practical turn of mind, is instinctively careful and prudent, and does not make up his mind hastily on matters of importance.

Taft is of jovial, happy, light-hearted disposition, probably full of fun and humor, is attested by the easy swing of his pen, the absence of heavy pressure, free from ostentatious quirks and curves suggesting a simplicity of effort in penning his name.

It is a beautiful nature—one full of kindness and good will. Taft may have a judicial mind (the writing in this specimen does not reveal this faculty), but he would not be a very great success in the intricacies of business life. He is too conscientious.

The nature is more or less passive. He depends on his expansive judgment and strong reasoning powers for achievement in the world of commercialism.

Trying New Stunts To Boost Play

Rehearsals are Progressing Nicely for "Fanny and the Servant Problem"

Several interest teasers are being worked at Lawrence college by the play production class management which has charge of the presentation of Jerome K. Jerome's "Fanny and the Servant Problem" at Lawrence Memorial Chapel on May 4. A series of questions and answers in which Fanny solves the "domestic" problems of the students and faculty are being posted daily on a bulletin board. Since these letters allow nice gossip bits about the students to leak out, they are read with keen enjoyment by all but the ones who happen to be the butt of the jokes.

According to statistics, 1200 townpeople and students attended the performance of "Come Out of the Kitchen," last year. A guessing contest is being conducted among the students on the number who will attend this year. The person who guesses the number nearest the actual count will be given a prize.

The seat sale is being conducted on a sorority competition basis with teams from each sorority selling tickets. A gate legged mahogany table suitable for their sorority rooms is being offered as the prize. The play itself is coming along nicely according to Prof. F. W. Orr who is in charge of the coaching. The story offers so many amusing situations that it is considered one of the funniest of Jerome's plays.

"BIKE" DEALERS LOOK FOR BUMPER SALES THIS YEAR

$3,287 OF SCOUT
BUDGET FOR 1922
HAS BEEN PAID IN

Standardized Machines Increasing in Popularity Every Year

Dealers predict an increased demand for bicycles this season and are planning accordingly. They base their predictions on the increased amount of employment of men who make use of them in going to and from work, and to the increased number of men who are using them for light delivery work instead of automobiles or motor trucks. Many office employees have returned also to their wheels for transportation because of the lack of office garages in many instances and other reasons of economy.

William G. Groth of the firm of William A. Groth Sons, which makes a specialty of bicycles, predicts an increased sale because the purchaser will get more for his money in the way of a finer spring saddle, higher grade tires, roller chains and pedals than he has had for the last eight years.

BICYCLES STANDARDIZED

"Bicycles have been standardized for the last ten years," said Mr. Groth, "so there are very few changes in this year's models. The gear ratio has been somewhat reduced and there are several special finishes in channels, but the saddle and other parts of the wheel are about the same as previous years. We carry all priced machines but find the medium priced machines the best seller."

P. A. Thyler basis his prediction for a good bicycle year on the large number of men employed in the mills, who are inspecting the different makes and inquiring as to their good qualities and to the fact prices have been reduced from $5 to $10.

Mr. Fassler said his sales this year are away ahead of last year or the year before that.

A standard 26 inch rim front and back instead of a 22 and 26 inch rim is used this year and they are made to fit any wheel. Saddle, pedals and handle bars have also been standardized and are used on different makes of bicycles.

G. S. Galpin of Galpin Sons said indications for a good bicycle season are more favorable than they were at this time last year. Many are being purchased this year by school children and men who use them in going to work.

E. A. Krause of Schaefer Hardware Co. and the prospects for a good 1922 cycle year never looked brighter. The reduction in price has caused an increased demand on the part of children and small employes. The standard wheels are the most popular, Mr. Krause said, because damaged parts can be replaced.

FORMER APPLETON RESIDENT KILLED

Ord Hammel Dies When He Drops Loaded Revolver—Left Here in 1920

Ord Hammel, formerly of Appleton, accidentally shot himself and died from the wound in Witten on Easter Sunday. Mr. Hammel was cleaning his automatic revolver, when he dropped it and it discharged, the bullet entering his body just under his lower lip. He was alone in the house but was able to run across the street to the home of a neighbor where he died 15 minutes later. Mrs. Alice Hammel, his mother, was in Nebraska at the home of her mother who was seriously ill.

Two brothers and a sister, who live within three miles of the place where the accident occurred were not able to reach him before his death. The young man came to Appleton with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis C. Hammel in 1905 and remained here until the spring of 1920. The family lived on South River Street opposite West Park.

Besides his mother, he is survived by five brothers: Orry E. Oshkosh; Mahlon G. Abbottford; L. C. Courtland; Witten; Guylard E. Lincoln, Neb.; Royal; Witten; three sisters, Mrs. Edward Baker, Witten; Mrs. L. J. Cole and Miss Bernice Hammel, Appleton. He is also survived by two aged grandmothers. Burial was made in Maplehurst Cemetery April 19.

WIND SWEEPS HIGH WAVE OVER WINNECONNE BANKS

The flood situation in Winneconne presents many ludicrous as well as serious sights. An Appleton man who was in Winneconne Wednesday said that the water was at the highest point that it has been since the beginning of the flood.

Winds coming from the northwest and shifting to the north drove the water in the village so high that it has dislodged about 20 boathouses from their moorings. The water rose so high under the bridge that the spray from the waves saturated the hay on wagons that were passing back.

Stoffman, Mrs. Edward Schueler, Mrs. L. A. Youtz, Mrs. George H. Packard and Miss Dorothy Haworth.

Clever Tongues Got Them Long Ride In Police Car

It took the alert little minds of Carlton and Norman Knoll, 8 and 10, respectively, to keep the police department guessing Wednesday afternoon, and they almost "put one over" on their mother, Mrs. Gustave Knoll, 57 Luminous-st.

Mrs. W. J. Bergacker, 330 North-st., saw the two little chaps trudging along near her home early in the afternoon, shivering and their teeth chattering. The pair had been playing near the river and had fallen into either the river or into a water puddle, but had scrambled to safety with only a wetting.

Mrs. Bergacker took the boys to her home and provided them with some of the clothing used by her own boys. The youths seemed unable to give an accurate account of where they lived, so their benefactor asked the police to take charge of the boys and return them to their parents.

The clever campaign which has been a departure from the usual spectator and highly organized drives has proved itself a distinct success. It was conducted by the board of directors of the Rotary club and 10 additional members of the Scout council. Dr. Everett Brooks was chairman of the special campaign committee. Dr. Harry K. Pratt, the chairman of the prospects committee, and H. B. Buck, Scout executive, chairman of the details committee.

Shattuck and L. D. Beals, it is announced. The total authorized capitalization is $850,000, of which $275,000 has been issued.

A trust deed of the U. S. Tractor and Machinery company of Menasha to the First Trust company of Appleton has been filed to secure an issue of $250,000 in 7 per cent gold bonds dated March 1, 1922. It is an unusually long document, covering 42 typewritten pages and carries $125 in revenue stamps.

POULTRYMEN HOPE TO GET STATE MEET

Preliminary steps were taken at the meeting of Fox River Valley Poultry and Pet Stock association at George Loe's harness shop Wednesday evening for securing the annual state meetings of the Plymouth Rock Breeders association and the White Wyandotte Breeders association during the annual poultry show in January. Members of the local association were enthusiastic over the prospect of securing these state meetings which will increase the number of their exhibits nearly one-half with some of the finest birds to be seen in Wisconsin.

"Yes," said Mrs. Knoll, "My boys sometimes go away like that, but I hope you get them home all right."

The driver went back to his machine and started away, when Mrs. Knoll called after him: "Wait a minute. These are my boys."

The clever little pair had sat complacently in the automobile looking at their mother, never hinting that they were at their own home. They evidently wanted a ride to Potato Point and back.

Announcement of detailed plans for tournaments, horseshoe pitching rules and advice on how to play the game well will be printed as soon as the courts are laid out.

BLAINE TO BE GUEST AT U. C. T. CONVENTION

A number of Appleton Knights of the grip are planning to attend the state convention of the United Commercial Travelers at Fond du Lac June 1 to 3. The convention city will be in gala attire. Merchants will decorate their windows and the streets in the U. C. T. yellow and blue colors. Plans are also being made to organize a cavalry escort of former service men for the carriage of Governor John J. Blaine who will be the guest of the city.

"I had suffered constantly from rheumatism. No one can imagine the pain I had endured, especially in my right arm and limbs. They also felt numb and seemed to be without circulation so much of the time. My appetite was none too good, either, and I really do feel just 100 per cent improved now. I'm glad to tell the Appleton public of my experience with this wonderful medicine."

Have YOU noticed the remarkable enthusiasm with which local people are praising Trutona? They do not merely indorse this famous tonic—they marvel over the relief it has given them—their words fairly teem with gratitude for benefits they have gained from nervousness, sleeplessness, loss of appetite, back, side, neck, pains, constipation, gastritis and the like. Trutona will do for YOU just what it is doing for scores of YOUR OWN HOME TOWN residents. Clerks at Schlitz Bros. store are always glad to explain the merits of Trutona to interested customers.

Thus Durkee-St. Woman Expresses Gratitude To Famous Tonic—Relieved Her of Back Pains, Dizziness and Constipation—100 Per Cent Improved.

"It's actually almost unbelievable that any medicine could help me like this new preparation Trutona has," emphatically declared Mrs. M. H. Buss, wife of a well known local retired farmer, residing at 925 Durkee street.

Trutona's already given me more relief than anything I've ever taken," she continued. "I used to have kidney pains in my back had made my daily housework a torture. In the mornings, I'd often get up feeling so dizzy and sore that I'd have to catch hold of something to keep from falling. If I happened to stoop over I could hardly recover, due to the sharp pains across my kidneys. Constipation has always been one of my worst ailments. Trutona has helped me so much that I'm sure others, troubled similarly will get the same relief that I did. I scarcely notice the former severe pains in back at all now and I don't have those dizzy, 'damp' spells as before. My bowels act regularly every day, too and I really do feel just 100 per cent improved now. I'm glad to tell the Appleton public of my experience with this wonderful medicine."

In Many Battles But Counts Recent Victory The Greatest of All

A. S. Kellogg
A. S. Kellogg, 232 North Gleannan, Freeport, Ill., went through many battles of the Civil War, but he has just recently won the greatest battle of his life—a victory over health troubles. Trutona, the famous tonic now being introduced at Schlitz Bros. did it. Mr. Kellogg says:

"My appetite was poor and I couldn't eat the few things I cared for because of severe pains in my stomach afterward," he said. "I didn't sleep well and consequently invariably felt tired and worn out during the day. But since taking Trutona, I eat anything I care for without suffering the pains in my stomach and best of all I'm at last able to sleep soundly all night long. My former tired, worn out feeling has left me. I certainly can recommend Trutona to the public as a most wonderful tonic."

It is true that "emergency often teaches mortalem lessons," but why wait for emergency with all its attendant trials and tribulations to learn YOUR lesson?

The lesson of emergency—that eleven hours attempt to remedy long standing troubles—often comes too late in the matter of health. Innumerable people realize the magnitude of their troubles only when they have gone beyond the power of science to relieve. If YOU are awakened and rundown, feel tired and dragging or suffer pains anywhere, DON'T WAIT for emergency. DON'T WAIT, it might be too late!

Secondary only to your decision to act is the care which should be exercised in the selection of a medicine. Don't experiment with your health or resorting to medicines of unproven merit. Your decision to take Trutona eliminates all such danger. It is the public endorsements of thousands of people—many right here in YOUR OWN HOME TOWN—are to be taken as proof (and they surely are) Trutona's merits have been proven beyond the question of a doubt. The care and skill exercised in compounding this famous tonic, has been rewarded in the grateful praise of thousands.

TRUTONA, the Famous Tonic, which Scores of Local People are Now Taking, is sold in Appleton at SCHLITZ BROS. Drug Store, Where it is Highly Recommended As An Unequalled Remedy and Reconstructive Agency for Overcoming After-Effects of Influenza, Pneumonia, Coughs, Colds and the Like.

THE LUCK OF ROARING CAMP

BY BRET HARTE

COPYRIGHT BY HOUGHTON, MIFLIN COMPANY, SOLE AUTHORIZED AGENTS IN AMERICA OF BRET HARTE'S WORKS. PUBLISHED BY ARRANGEMENT WITH THE LITERARY DIGEST NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE.

THERE was commotion in Roaring Camp; it could not have been a fight, for in 1850 that was tried. It was less problematical than the ancient treatment of Romulus and Remus, and apparently as successful.

When these details were completed, which exhausted another hour, the door was opened, and the anxious crowd of men, who had already formed themselves into a queue, entered in single file. Beside the low bunk or shelf, on which the figure of the mother was starkly outlined below the blankets, stood a pine table. On this a candle-box was placed, and within it, swathed in starling red flannel, lay the last arrival at Roaring Camp. Beside the candle-box was placed a hat. Its use was soon indicated. "Gentlemen," said Stumpy, with a singular mixture of authority and ex officio complicity, "gentlemen will please pass in at the front door, round the table, and out at the back door. As we wish to contribute anything toward the orphan will find a hat handy."

THE first man entered with his hat on; he uncovered, however, as he looked about him, and unconsciously set an example to the next. In such communities good and bad actions are catching. As the procession filed in comments were audible—criticisms addressed perhaps to Stumpy in the character of showman: "Is that him?" "Mighty small specimen." "Hasn't more got the color?" "Ain't bigger nor a d—ringer." The contributions were characteristic: A silver tobacco box; a navy revolver, silver mounted; a gold specimen; a very beautifully embroidered lady's handkerchief from Oakhurst; the rambler; a diamond bracelet; a diamond ring (suggested by the pin); a diamond ring (suggested by the pin) that he "saw that pin and went to diamonds better"; a shotgun; a Bible (contributor not detected); a golden spur; a silver teaspoon (the initials, I regret to say, were not the givers); a pair of surgeon's shears; a lancer; a Bank of England note for $5 and about $200 in loose gold and silver coin. During these proceedings Stumpy maintained a silence as impassive as the dead on his left, a gravity as inscrutable as that of the newly born on his right. Only one incident occurred to break the monotony of the curious procession. As Kentuck bent over the candle-box half curiously the child turned, and, in a spasm of pain, caught at his groping finger, and it held it fast for a moment. Kentuck looked foolish and embarrassed. Something like a blush tried to assert itself in his weather-beaten cheek. "The d—l little cuss," he said, as he extricated his finger, with perhaps more tenderness and care than he might have been deemed capable of showing. He held that little finger apart from its fellows as he went out and examined it curiously. The examination provoked the same original remark in regard to the child. In fact he seemed to enjoy repeating it. "He rascalled with my finger," he remarked to Tipton, holding up the member "the d—l little cuss."

It was 4 o'clock before the camp sought repose. A light burned in the cabin where the watchers sat, for Stumps did not go to bed that night. Nor did Kentuck. He drank quite freely, and related with great gusto his experience, invariably ending with his characteristic condemnation of the newcomer. It seemed to relieve him of any unjust implication of sentiment, and Kentuck had the weakness of the nobler sex. When every body else had gone to bed, he walked down to the river and whistled reflectively. Then he walked up the gulch past the cabin, still whistling with demonstrative unconcern. At a large redwood tree he paused and retraced his steps, and again passed the cabin. Halfway down to the river's bank he again paused, and then returned and knocked at the door. It was opened by Stumpy. "How goes it?" said Kentuck, looking past Stumpy toward the candle-box. "All screed," replied Stumpy. "Anything up?" "Nothing." There was a pause—an embarrassing Stumpy still holding the door. Then Kentuck had recourse to his finger, which he held up to Stumpy. "Rascalled with it—the d—l little cuss," he said, and retired.

THE next day Cherokee Sal had such rude sepulture as Roaring Camp afforded. After her body had been committed to the hills, there was a formal meeting of the camp to discuss what should be done with her infant. A resolution adopted it was unanimous and enthusiastic. An animated discussion ensued an exclamation came from those nearest the door, and the camp regard to the manner and feasibility of providing for its wants at once stopped to listen. Above the swaying and moaning of the pines, the swift rush of the river, and the crackling of the fire rose a sharp, querulous cry—a cry unlike anything heard before in the camp. The pines stopped moaning; the river ceased to rush and the fire crackled. It seemed as if Nature had stopped to listen, too.

The camp rose to its feet as one man! It was proposed to explode a barrel of gunpowder; but in consideration of the situation of the mother, better counseled prevailed, and only a few revolvers were discharged; for whether owing to the rude surgery of the camp, or some other reason, Cherokee Sal was sinking fast. Within an hour she had climbed, as it were, that rugged road that led to the stars, and so passed out of Roaring Camp, its sin and shame, forever. I do not think that the announcement disturbed them much, except in speculation as to the fate of the child. "Can he live now?" was asked of Stumpy. The answer was doubtful. The only other being of Cherokee Sal's sex and material condition in the settlement of propriety—the first symptom of the camp's regeneration. Stumpy advanced nothing. Perhaps he felt a certain delicacy in interfering with the selection of a possible successor in office. But when questioned, he averred stoutly that he and "Jinny"—the mammal before alluded to—could manage to rear the child. There was something original, independent, and heroic about the plan that pleased the camp. Stumpy was retained. Certain articles were sent to Sacramento. "Mind," said the treasurer, as he pressed a bag of gold dust into the expressman's hand, "the best that can be got—face, you know, and filigree-work and frills, d—n the cost!"

Strange to say, the child thrived. Perhaps the invigorating climate of the mountain camp was compensation for material deficiencies. Nature took the foundling to her broader breast. In that rare atmosphere of the Sierra foothills, that air fragrant with balsamic odor, that ethereal cordial at once bracing and exhilarating—he may have found food and nourishment or a subtle chemistry that transmuted "ass" milk to lime and phosphorus. Stumpy inclined to the belief that it was the latter and good nursing. "Me and that ass," he would say, "have been father and mother to him! Not you," he would add, apostrophizing the helpless bundle shown him: "Is that him?" "Mighty small specimen." "Hasn't more got the color?" "Ain't bigger nor a d—ringer." The contributions were characteristic: A silver tobacco box; a navy revolver, silver mounted; a gold specimen; a very beautifully embroidered lady's handkerchief from Oakhurst; the rambler; a diamond bracelet; a diamond ring (suggested by the pin); a diamond ring (suggested by the pin) that he "saw that pin and went to diamonds better"; a shotgun; a Bible (contributor not detected); a golden spur; a silver teaspoon (the initials, I regret to say, were not the givers); a pair of surgeon's shears; a lancer; a Bank of England note for $5 and about $200 in loose gold and silver coin. During these proceedings Stumpy maintained a silence as impassive as the dead on his left, a gravity as inscrutable as that of the newly born on his right. Only one incident occurred to break the monotony of the curious procession. As Kentuck bent over the candle-box half curiously the child turned, and, in a spasm of pain, caught at his groping finger, and it held it fast for a moment. Kentuck looked foolish and embarrassed. Something like a blush tried to assert itself in his weather-beaten cheek. "The d—l little cuss," he said, as he extricated his finger, with perhaps more tenderness and care than he might have been deemed capable of showing. He held that little finger apart from its fellows as he went out and examined it curiously. The examination provoked the same original remark in regard to the child. In fact he seemed to enjoy repeating it. "He rascalled with my finger," he remarked to Tipton, holding up the member "the d—l little cuss."

It was 4 o'clock before the camp sought repose. A light burned in the cabin where the watchers sat, for Stumps did not go to bed that night. Nor did Kentuck. He drank quite freely, and related with great gusto his experience, invariably ending with his characteristic condemnation of the newcomer. It seemed to relieve him of any unjust implication of sentiment, and Kentuck had the weakness of the nobler sex. When every body else had gone to bed, he walked down to the river and whistled reflectively. Then he walked up the gulch past the cabin, still whistling with demonstrative unconcern. At a large redwood tree he paused and retraced his steps, and again passed the cabin. Halfway down to the river's bank he again paused, and then returned and knocked at the door. It was opened by Stumpy. "How goes it?" said Kentuck, looking past Stumpy toward the candle-box. "All screed," replied Stumpy. "Anything up?" "Nothing." There was a pause—an embarrassing Stumpy still holding the door. Then Kentuck had recourse to his finger, which he held up to Stumpy. "Rascalled with it—the d—l little cuss," he said, and retired.

After her body had been committed to the hills, there was a formal meeting of the camp to discuss what should be done with her infant. A resolution adopted it was unanimous and enthusiastic. and to invite one or two decent families to reside there for the sake of The Luck, who might perhaps profit by female companionship. The sacrifice that this concession to the sex cost these men, who were fiercely skeptical in regard to its general virtue and usefulness, can only be accounted for by their affection for Tommy. A few still held out. But the resolve could not be carried into effect for three months, and the majority meekly yielded in the hope that something might turn up to prevent it. And it did.

The winter of 1851 will long be remembered in the foothills. The snow lay deep on the Sierras, and every mountain creek became a river and every river a lake. Each gorge and gulch was transformed into a tumbling water-course that descended the hillsides, tearing down giant trees and scattering its drift and debris along the plain. Red Dog had been forewarned. "Water put the gold into them gulches," said Stumpy. "It's been here once and will be here again." And that night the North Fork suddenly leaped over its banks and swept up the triangular valley of Roaring Camp.

In the confusion of rushing water, crashing trees, and crackling timber, and the darkness which seemed to flow with the water and blot out the fair valey, but little could be done to collect the scattered camp. When the morning broke, the cabin of Stumpy, nearest the river bank, was gone. Higher up the gulch they found the body of the unlucky owner; but the pride, the hope, the joy, The Luck, of Roaring Camp had disappeared. They were returning with sad hearts when a shout from the bank recalled them.

It was a relief-boat from down the river. They had picked up, they said, a man and an infant, nearly exhausted, about two miles below. Did anybody know them, and did they belong here?

It needed but a glance to show them Kentuck lying there, cruelly crushed and bruised, but still holding The Luck of Roaring Camp in his arms. As they bent over the strangely asorted pair, they saw that the child was cold and pulseless. "He is dead," said one. Kentuck opened his eyes. "Dead?" he repeated feebly. "Yes, my man, and you are dying, too." A smile lit the eyes of the expiring Kentuck. "Dying?" he depeated. "he's a-taking me with him. The boys I've got The Luck with me now," and the strong man, clinging to the frail babe as a drowning man is said to cling to straw, drifted away into the shadowy river that flows forever to the unknown sea.

SEEK YOUNG MEN FOR TRAINING IN U.S. ARMY CAMP

County Will Be Granted Quota for Military School at Camp Custer, Mich.

Several young men from Outagamie-co. are to be given opportunity this year to attend the citizens' military training camp to be conducted by the government for the Sixth corps area at Camp Custer, Mich., from Aug. 2 to Sept. 2. Applications will be received up to May 31 by Alfred S. Bradford, county chairman, or by Major Albert Tucker of this city, an officer of the regular army.

"I would urge all who want this vacation training this year to give me their names at once," Mr. Bradford says. "Last year Chicago took up the whole quota and nobody else could go. This year counties in other parts of the district have been allowed a certain number of applicants, and those who enrol early have the best chance to enter."

NO EXPENSE

Any young men between the ages of 17 and 27 who can pass an ordinary physical examination may enter the camp. There is no requirement to enlist in the army or in any branch of service. All expenses, including railroad fare, board, uniforms and incidentals are paid by the government. The purpose of the camp is to furnish young Americans a chance to secure a military training under favorable conditions, and to so develop them physically, mentally and morally as to increase their ability to render service to their country in time of need.

Camp Custer will accept 2,600 applicants from Wisconsin, Michigan and Illinois. It is located near Battle Creek, Mich., and is several hours' ride from Detroit and Chicago. Its program will include athletics and recreation as well as the customary military training.

Three courses of training are to be offered, and the applicant is to choose one when filling out his enrollment blank. They are termed red, white and blue courses. The red is for ages 17 to 25, and requires no previous military training. Those completing it may qualify for the organized reserves.

Age limits for the white course are 18 to 26 and the physical requirements are somewhat higher than for the red. The blue course is for men of ages 19 to 27, with the same physical requirements as for the white. Applicants must have at least a high school education.

Details concerning these courses, medical examinations, enlistment requirements and facts about the camp and training will be given to all who apply to Mr. Bradford at his office over Dwyer drug store, or to Major Tucker at the city hall.

RIVER IS GETTING BACK TO NORMALCY

Constantly receding level of the Fox river and Lake Winnebago indicates that the flood stage is almost over. The river dropped about two inches Wednesday and was going down Thursday morning.

Caretakers and engineers inspecting dams, bridges and locks are finding everything in good shape, it is said. Unless there are some unforeseen occurrences the dams and locks will easily withstand the strain to which they are being subjected.

"Latest Fiction Book" Is Worst Habit In Appleton

Librarians Destroy Copy of "The Sheik" Because of Low Moral Tone

The reporter may have been looking for scandal among the book worms or merely browsing around between little used book shelves picking out numberless books and which she would love to sit right down and read if there was no newspaper office demanding her return at once. And then the shocking fact came out. It was this:

"And would you believe it, my dear," groaned the librarian right in your city library. "The whole town has the disease, and it spreads rapidly among children as well as grown-ups. For the adults, there is no hope, but the children could be saved from this awful habit of reading the latest book of fiction."

The reporter had ventured to ask what was the most common hobby among the people as shown by the demand for books. Like magic it came out of the mouth of the librarian without a moment's hesitation: "The Latest Fiction Book" is the worst habit I know." You see what people read is all important in their development mentally and it is a serious subject with the librarians.

GETS 'EM EVENTUALLY

"Bosh," you say. "Why should they care what I read?"

Fiction of today is like pie, rich hot mince pie! It won't kill you if you eat it once but even the most complacent of restaurant owners would venture a word of warning if the majority of his patrons ate nothing but hot mince pie and that three times a day.

Many women who have good educations read books which are of no literary value on the ground that their minds are weary. School girls do not know that there are any other books than novels and text books. The latter are so wearying that they must be counter-acted by the former.

Only the best of the available fiction books are now being purchased by the library and only a comparatively small percentage of those. Many other types of books are necessary to bring the Appleton library up to the standard for this size city and since the popularity of fiction books is so short-lived it is not economical to buy too many.

"THE SHEIK" DESTROYED

C. C. DIRECTORS FAVOR VIADUCT IN WEST END OF CITY

Businessmen May Urge State Highway Commission to Hurry Bridge Case

Directors of the chamber of commerce have gone on record, in a resolution recently adopted, as favoring construction of a bridge or viaduct in the west end of Appleton, if one is built. The resolution has been given to Mayor Reuter who will submit it to the council at its next meeting.

It is reported from Madison that the Wisconsin highway commission again is taking an interest in the bridge matter in Appleton. Last fall there was every indication that some action would be taken on the matter of advancing state aid for construction of a bridge across the Fox River and the Post-Crescent conducted a referendum to determine whether the people wanted the bridge across the river at Lake-st. or in the west end of the city.

This referendum showed that a vast majority of people favor the west end location and the highway commission was so advised.

Nothing further was done, however.

It was reported that Governor Blaine had advised against expenditure of state money for building bridges in cities this year but this report never has been verified.

The men came to Appleton because of better hotel accommodations. The crew was one of four that was sent to Appleton shortly after the storm, but was called to southern Michigan after completing temporary repairs.

About two miles of wires were strung on fence posts, trees and buildings and still is rendering service.

EXPLORERS SEEK RICHES BURIED IN GREAT ICE FLOES

Amundsen and Stefansson in Race to Find Wealth in Arctic Circle

San Francisco—Captain C. D. Peck, lone wolf of the Arctic, is hurrying to get a ringside seat under the Aurora Borealis. From that vantage point he wants to watch history's greatest international marathon across the top of the world in which the untold riches of the northland will reward the victor. Principals in the international race to the pole will be Roald Amundsen, discoverer of the south pole, who will represent Norway, and Vilhjalmur Stefansson, who will carry the flag of Great Britain.

Their race will start as soon as the ice breaks up—Amundsen from Seattle with a ship equipped with airplanes and radio; Stefansson from Wrangel Island with the old fashioned equipment of dog sleds.

STAKE IS LARGE

The two explorers tell the world they'll shut themselves off from civilization and risk their lives in the ice floes for the glory of discovery and scientific achievement.

But "Wolf" Pederson says there's more than that in the expedition. He sees a race for vast treasures hidden behind ice barriers.

He says the explorers are seeking for Norway and England great radium mines, vast oil fields and coal deposits, fossil ivory, diamonds, areas of fertile land where reindeers thrive.

And Pederson ought to know. For every year, in the last quarter century, the "lone wolf" has carried the American flag into the Arctic at the masthead of his whaling schooner "Herman."

RESCUED AMUNDSEN

He's one of the unsung solvers of northland mysteries. He knows the ice lanes of the north as you know the circuits of your city. Six years ago he rescued Amundsen when the famous explorer was marooned in an ice sea.

"I cannot believe," Pederson says, "that England and Norway have gone to this great expense purely for exploration purposes."

"For myself I have seen oil ooze from the ground and form a lake near Point Barrow—oil so pure that natives burn it in lamps without refining."

"And I have seen coal beds so easily tapped that even the lazy natives use them."

RADUM AND DIAMONDS

"That is not all—I have heard tales of fossil ivory of fur of radium of great meteoric diamond beds that formerly furnished crown jewels for Russia. The wealth of the Arctic is tremendous."

The crack of the opening ice will be the starting signal for the great international race—the old method versus the new, the patient Arctic dog versus the airplane and ship.

COUNTED 18 KINDS OF BIRDS ALONG RIVER

Birds that deserted Appleton last fall for warmer climes have nearly all returned from their southern haunts. While strolling along the shore of the Fox at Potato Point Friday morning H. P. Buck, scout executive of the Appleton Boy Scout council, counted no fewer than 18 different kinds of birds.

A group of ducks from a flock of several hundred became unusually confident and swam to within 12 feet from where Mr. Buck was sitting. Other birds flying about were grulls, phoebes, tree swallows, wrens, song sparrows, chipping sparrow, English sparrows, robins, brown creepers, chickadees, red headed woodpecker, meadow larks, chewick, rusty black birds, red winged blackbirds.

BUGLESS WORLD IS DREAM OF INVENTOR

Invents Machine Which Swallows Pests and Bugs by the Millions

Memphis, Tenn.—James E. Cross, Kenton, Tenn., college boy, has quit school to fight bugs.

He's going to fight 'em with the only bug catching device of its kind in the world, on which young Cross has just been granted a patent. He calls it the "big Bertha," and declares if he can only get enough of his machines into action this will soon be a bugless world.

He got his idea from the age-old story of the moth and the flame. But his light is an electric globe that illuminates a space of 1000 yards.

When the winged pests investigate the source of the light a small electric turbine at the base of the machine creates a vacuum, which sucks them into the big funnel containing the light and down through a tube to the maw of the machine and into a trap.

CHECKED BOLL WEEVIL

Cross was reared on a cotton plantation and has always been interested in the fight made by the farmers to check the ravages of the boll weevil that last year destroyed one-third of the nation's cotton crop. He designed his trap especially to rid his father's farm of the deadly cotton weevil.

He says his first "big Bertha" a home made affair, trapped from 10 to 15 bushels of weevil a night. His latest, he says, rids 15 acres of cotton boll weevils in two nights' time.

Now the young inventor sees a "big Bertha" on street intersections of large cities, illuminating them as well as gathering into its maw the winged pests of the night.

"I am working on a model now for houses," says the boy inventor. "It will be about the size of an electric fan. It'll light the room and cool it by the vacuum method and at the same time gather up all the bugs and the dust particles."

In Thursday's edition of The Post-Crescent, we carried an advertisement describing our Hosiery selling for $1.50 to $2.00 as "FULL FASHIONED." Although this is high-class hosiery and an exceptionally good value at the prices quoted, an oversight on our part caused the quotation that these were both full fashioned.

The $1.50 Hose is not fashioned, although the $2.00 Hose is full fashioned in both foot and leg. This hose is finished entirely by machine under a new process by the "True Shape" Hosiery Co. and without question offers our customers an unusual stocking for the price.

STILL DANGEROUS TO OPEN SLUICE GATES AT NEENAH

Engineers Fear Locks Will be Washed Out if Discharge of Water is Increased

Senator Robert M. LaFollette indicated an intention to take a hand in the fight of riparian owners along the Wolf river to protect their lands against high water when he requested the names of mill owners along the Wolf river who fail to cooperate in reducing the level of the lake. He also requested details concerning alleged failure to cooperate. This information is requested in a telegram to Mayor R. D. Haentze of Fond du Lac who is making a determined effort to have the sluice gates in the Neenah dam opened in order to lower the lake.

Major Haentze carried his fight to representatives in congress and to the war department. He was told in every instance that the United States engineers in Milwaukee, who have charge of the situation in the Fox river valley, are doing all in their power to relieve flood conditions.

ENDANGER LOCKS

The engineers said the Neenah gates could not be opened without endangering all the dams and locks in the lower river. This is doubted by Allan H. Tripp, president of the commission for relief of high water in the Wolf river.

Major F. S. Skinner, in charge of the engineers office in Milwaukee, said opening of more sluice gates would be sure to wash out locks and dams and put an end to navigation for the year.

The locks at Kimberly were in very serious danger of destruction until the water started to subside in the last two days, it is said. Opening of the sluice gates at Neenah will release a large quantity of water which is almost sure to wash out the canal banks, in spite of the high dikes of sandbags, and put the locks out of commission. The south wall of the canal leading to the locks is said to be in a weakened state as a result of the spring flood.

FEAR CALAMITY

Engineers are emphatic in their statements that opening of the Neenah gates would cause a calamity. They say that destruction of the flashboards on top of the Neenah dam has let 50 per cent more water out of the lake than would be discharged if the gates were open. In other words, if the flashboards on top of the dam had not been destroyed by ice and the Neenah sluice gates had been opened the discharge of water would be 50 per cent less than it is now.

Oshkosh city officials also are taking an interest in Mr. Tripp's fight and inspected the locks at Kimberly a day or two ago to see for themselves if there is any danger. They were determined to bring pressure on the engineers to open the gates at Neenah if they felt that doing so would not jeopardize the government navigation works.

INDUSTRIAL ENGINEER SPEAKS HERE TONIGHT

Shea, industrial engineer of the Western Electric Co., of Chicago, who is to speak in the vocational school Friday evening on "Standardization," will appear under the auspices of former servicemen's class which is being conducted at the vocational school. Motion pictures will illustrate the address.

Announcement cards were mailed Thursday and a large crowd is expected. The talk is said to be especially interesting to manufacturers.

DEMAND FOR MEN NOW ABOUT EQUAL TO JOB HUNTERS

Plenty of Work for Laborers but "White Collar" Jobs are Scarce

"White collar" jobs are about the only kind that are scarce in Appleton now, a review of the employment situation shows. The demand for common labor and the number of men seeking such jobs are about equal and all men who apply usually are placed at once.

Papermills, sawmills and construction companies are calling for common laborers almost every day. C. L. Boynton, employment secretary of the Y. M. C. A. says. Every man who has applied for work has been assigned to an employer. Some of the jobs are only for a week or two, but something else usually awaits the men who come back again.

Work as hired hands on farms does not have much of an appeal to the unemployed, Mr. Boynton finds. There are a number of vacancies listed, but nobody to fill them.

FEW CLERICAL JOBS

Many requests have reached the Y.

M. C. A. from men who seek clerical positions in stores or offices and several want work as salesmen. There are no vacancies of this kind. A number of women also seek positions as domestics, stenographers and bookkeepers, but very few can be accommodated.

Joseph Marston, Jr., employment secretary of Onay Johnston post of the American Legion, announces that most of the former service men previously out of work have been placed in jobs. He also finds a brisk demand for laborers but has difficulty placing men wanting clerical work. He is asking all war veterans out of work to file names with him if this has not been done already, because plenty of work is obtainable.

This situation is regarded as an index to improved business and that the coming summer will be much more prosperous than the last. This is the first time for months that the demand for men has caught up to applications and stayed there.

"Let your Grocer be your Milkman"

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Fate had seen fit to shape the life of young BARRY HOUSTON into a series of tragic molds. A bitter experience in his past caused his father to lose faith in his son and therefore bequeathed to him timber holdings in Tabernacle only on condition that a high output be maintained.

Mysterious accidents have prevented this and Houston, arriving from Boston, finds that this is due to the treachery of his mill superintendent, FRED THAYER. Houston is assisted in his work in the timber country by

BATISTE RENAULT, an eccentric French-Canadian, whose life has been saddened by the double tragedy of his son's death in France and the unsolved murder of his wife. Houston discharges Thayer despite the remonstrances of

AGNES JIERTON, a girl who has a mysterious hold over Houston. The mill is burned. Houston decides to carry on the fight when he is confronted with a forged lease which turns his timber rights over to a neighboring lumber company. Houston claims he doesn't remember signing such a lease. In the presence of

MEDAINE ROBINETTE, to whom Houston is attracted, Thayer says Houston probably doesn't remember the night he murdered his cousin

TOM LANGDON. GO ON WITH THE STORY

White-hot with anger, Barry Houston leaped forward, to find himself caught in the arms of the sheriff and thrown back. He whirled — and stopped, looking with glazed, deadened eyes into the blanched, horrified features of a girl who evidently had heard the accusation, a girl who stood poised in revision a moment before she turned, and, almost running, hurried to mount her horse and ride away. And the strength of anger left the muscles of Barry Houston. The red flame of indignation turned to a sodden, dead thing. He could only realize that Medaine Robinette had heard him accused without a single statement given in his own behalf; that Medaine, the girl of his smoke-wreathed dreams, now fully and thoroughly believed him—a murderer!

CHAPTER IX

Houston turned back to the sheriff and to theoggle-eyed Batiste, trying to fathom it all. Weakly he motioned toward Thayer, and his words, when they came, were hollow and expressionless:

"That's a lie, Sheriff. I admit that I have been accused of murder. I was acquitted. You say that nothing counts but court action—and that's all I have to say in my behalf. In regard—to this, I'll obey the court order until I can prove to the judge's satisfaction that this whole thing is a fraud and a fake. In the meanwhile almost pitifully, "do you care to go with me, Batiste?"

Heavily, silently, the French Canadian joined him, and together they walked down the narrow road to the camp. Neither spoke for a long time.

"Well, Batiste," came in strained tones, "I might as well hear it now. You'll only be leaving a sinking ship."

"What you do?"

"That depends entirely on you. If you're with me, I fight. If not — well frankly—I don't know."

"Member the mill, when he burn down?"

"Yes."

"You no believe Batise did heem. Well, now I no believe either."

"Honestly, Batiste?" Houston had gripped the other man's arm. "You don't believe it? You don't—"

"Batise believe M'sieu Houston. You look like my Pierre. My Pierre, he could do no wrong. Batise says,

"It sent a new flow of blood through the veins of Barry Houston — that simple, quiet statement of the old trapper. His voice bore a vibrant tone, almost of excitement:

"I'm going back to Boston tonight. I'm going to find out about this. There's fraud, Batiste — and I'll prove it if I can get back to Boston this whole thing — every step of the Miss Jerton knows the truth about way. Will you tell her?"

"Oui. Batise tell her—about the flume and M'sieu Thayer, what he say. You go Boston tonight?"

Yes."

Weazened, wrinkled-faced little Jenkins met him at the Boston office.

"You're back, Mr. Houston! I didn't know whether to send the notice from the Mountain, Plains and Salt Lake Railroad. It just came yesterday."

Abstractedly, Houston picked it up and glanced at the specifications.

"Jenkins!" Houston's voice was sharp, insistent. The weazened man entered, rubbing his hands.

"Have we any stumpage contracts?"

"Only one, sir."

"One? What?"

"The one you signed, sir, to Thayer and Blackburn, just a week or so before you started out west. Don't you remember, sir; you signed it, together with a lease for the flume site and lake?"

"I signed nothing of the sort!"

"You certainly did, sir."

"You're lying!"

"I don't lie, sir. I attested the signature and saw you read both contracts. Pardon, sir, but if any one's lying, sir—it's yourself!"

CHAPTER X

Ten minutes after that, Barry Houston was alone in his office. Jenkins was gone, discharged; and Houston felt a sort of relief in the knowledge that he had departed.

He returned to Tabernacle and attempted the only solution: he must secure timber from Medaine Robinette and bid on the railroad contract.

four o'clock in the morning. I was awakened by the police. They had found Tom Langdon dead, with his skull crushed, evidently by the blow of a club or hammer. They said I did it."

PUT HUSBAND IN GREEN ROOM TO KEEP HIM HAPPYNoted Psychologist Tells How Colors Influence Daily
Actions

Cleveland — Do you want to keep your husband contented; to make him stay at home evenings and like it?

Then use green or blue combinations in decorating your living room. Or, if he is inclined to be pessimistic, see that there is plenty of yellow in the wall papers and draperies.

That's the prescription of Elsie Lincoln Benedict, noted psychology lecturer who has recently finished a series of tests on the result of color and surroundings on efficiency.

"The reaction is immediate," she says. "The wife who wants to keep her husband happy and contented should study his disposition before art-

COMBINATIONS
For colorful rooms, use yellow, orange and red. For restful rooms, greens and blues. If you are apt to be pessimistic, use plenty of yellow. Violet is a neutral color.

It is always well to place some furniture away from the walls. If the room is large enough but the table or davenport near the center.

Choose the spaces in which pictures are to be hung with care. See that they harmonize with the shape of the picture.

Get good furniture. It is cheaper in the long run.

Let the rugs and wall paper help carry out the general color scheme.

ranging his home, for the psychology of color has a far-reaching, although often subconscious, effect upon our dispositions, temperaments and moods.

Any one who is surrounded by harmonious furnishings — hangings or furniture — feels their influence whether he knows it at the time or not.

The greatest business concerns of America have shown their recognition of this in the refurnishing, redecorating and rebuilding of their workrooms, shops, offices and lunchrooms.

But it is in the home that the influence of furnishings is most felt. The husband, returning to his own fireside after the work and worry of the day, is as much rested by a "rest full" room as by the leisure itself.

The mother and homemaker of today has one ideal above all others — to make her home one where hospitality, refuge, kindness and leisure are to be found, away from the outside world.

Nothing adds so this impression more effectively than tasteful furnishings, harmoniously combined. The old days of gewgaws and bric-a-brac have given way to quiet, plainer but more "homely" decorations. In fact we have few decorations — preferring to "decorate" with the furniture itself.

The child who grows up in a properly furnished home carries memories all his life that are helpful and uplifting, while the one whose memory-picture of home is otherwise has missed a very beautiful thing."

An outline of proper combinations follows: For colorful rooms use yellow, orange and red. For restful rooms use green and blue. If you are apt to be pessimistic use plenty of yellow. Violet is a natural color.

The Peanut's Speech!

The pasty man had a lovely party and the queer little candy and cake and fruit fairies were ever so kind to Nancy and Nick. After awhile there was speaking and they all sat down in rows to hear.

The first one to make a speech was the peanut, which said this: "Oh, hi diddle diddle! I'll ask you a riddle.

Can anyone tell where I grow? Do I grow on a tree, or an island at sea?"

Or up north in the ice and the snow? Do I grow like potatoes, way under ground?

Or like strawberries red on a vine, or on plants like tomatoes so smooth and so round?

Or like cones on an evergreen pine? Oh, hi diddle diddle!

Please answer my riddle.

I really have done my best,

And I hope you will look in your peanut book,

If the answer you haven't guessed."

The peanut made a stiff bow and sat down. No one applauded or clapped his hands because they were all busy trying to think of the answer.

The little chocolate drop fairies came out next in white frilly petticoats of plaited paper and sang a song with a chorus which went like this:

"We're plain as to feature.

We're dark as to skin,

We're fat and we're lumpy,

We long to be thin,

But right down inside us,

Our hearts are all right,

They're soft and they're snottless,

They're sweet and they're white.

Our friends count in millions

From north to the south,

And we fit in quite nicely,

To anyone's mouth."

Nancy said it made her hungry and Nick said please not to mention it.

But there were more speeches to be said and Buskins said it was bad manners to talk even if it were comments they were making.

OUR FIRST YEAR

Chapter 20—Robbed of An Old Right
By a Bride

YOU MAY BEGIN HERE

Despite herself, and a pact with her husband, Peggy finds it hard to maintain complete independence of action after marriage. First her extravagances caused her husband to put her on a budget. Now she encounters difficulties in her contacts with Bart Elliot, her platonic friend, with whom she is cast in amateur theatricals.

Budget planning had fussed me more than I liked to admit.

Like all brides, I was determined to please my husband. I wanted him to think me capable. I knew very well that when a girl marries, she ought to be competent to carry out her part of the contract. And I was discovering daily that I was not equal to my job!

After Jack had gone to work, I sat down to figure out how much I could spend for meat for dinner. When you've set aside a certain sum for food you've only begun with your budget. You've got to determine by calculation and experiment how much to pay for various articles of diet. And so I neglected my morning routine and sat down to the arithmetic of home-making.

My problem was interrupted by a call to rehearse "Shoal." I had not set my house in order when the summons came. I left things as they were and hurried over to the Little Playhouse.

It was an irritating morning. The actors did not know their lines. I didn't know mine. Bart had committed only the sentimental stuff.

Bart Elliot was awfully glad to see me, but he never mentioned our late disagreement half hour in my kitchen. And I felt more annoyed. Never had Bart put another girl's comfort before mine! Another of my girlhood privileges had been stripped from me by marriage.

But he did not. And his neglect of an old custom astonished me. He drove off with his "queen mother."

Once he would have argued the matter all over with me. And I found myself regretting a chance a quarrel with him smartly—about nothing at all—as we had done all our lives.

APPLETON PLAYERS PRACTICE FOR SUNDAY'S TILT

Valley League Team To Be In Shape For Hard Game With New London

Manager Brandt to Start Fast Lineup in First Contest of Season — Admission Price Sunday to be 25 Cents.

Ball players who will perform with the Appleton team in Fox River Valley baseball league will hold practice sessions Friday and Saturday afternoons in preparation for the game with New London Sunday afternoon on the local lot. All the men are in good shape and with two days of work together will be ready to show a high class brand of the national pastime.

Klawitter, last year manager and first baseman for the New London team, will be out in an Appleton uniform Sunday and will play in part of the game against his old teammates. Klawitter is coming to this city to discuss terms with manager August Brandt and if he signs a contract will hold down the initial sack for the Appleton club this season. Leopold, last year with Manitowoc in the Lake Shore circuit, is under contract to the Appleton club and will play part of the game Sunday at first base. If Klawitter signs a contract Leopold will be switched to an infield position.

The regular Appleton team will perform against New London Sunday. Schultz will pitch and the Appleton finger is in great form, ready to go the entire distance. Schott will receive Schultz's slants behind the plate. Leopold and Klawitter will each take a turn at playing first base. Gaffske will escort around the short field and Keene will hold down the key stone sack. Madlof will play third. The outfit will be composed of Jukka in left, Duran in center and Klem in right.

Frances has Carpenter, already defeated by Dempsey, Journeay and Neilles. The last two are jokers.

In America, among the white heavyes, there is an equal dearth of material.

Most of the well-known men of recent ring history have dropped out of sight, or, if they are heard of, it is merely a line or two that they have kissed the canvas once more.

Fred Fulton, once a promising white hope, whose speed and size kept many others out of the same ring, is anybody's meat since Bartley Madson demonstrated that the ponderous plasterer had nothing anyone need be afraid of.

Bill Brennan and Billy Miske are still showing something of their old time form, but as Dempsey has taken both of them it can hardly be said that either is entitled to consideration for a match with the champion.

Outside of Harry Wills, the negro heavyweight, there is not much of promise in the heavyweight division.

GOLF GREAT HELP TO CUE CHAMPION

By Billy Evans
Golf seems to be a conditioner for every other line of sport.

Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, is strong for golf. While far from a Jack Hutchinson Dempsey plays a pretty fair game.

During spring training trips most of the athletes play as much golf as baseball. As a matter of fact some managers are of the opinion that golf is being overdone by the ball players.

Jake Schaefer, billiard champ, is the latest titleholder to sing the praises of golf.

While most of the star golf players are expert at billiard Schaefer is the first billiard player of note to risk his hands swinging golf clubs.

Schaefer insists that the use of the wooden and iron clubs improves his long game of billiards and that the short golf game, putting and pitching, is helpful to his short cushion work, mense and masse shots.

"My father always advised that I stay away from all outdoor sports to protect my hands. When I took up golf many billiard players shoot their heads. They injured my billiard game would ruined."

A billiard player, like a golfer must have extremely supple wrists and fingers and free working shoulders. Golf has improved my billiard game.

The only danger to a billiardist in golf is that his fingers might stiffen a little. But I have never been bothered that way."

Walle Hoppe who tried in his recent match with Schaefer to regain the title that he held for a dozen years is a great lover of baseball. Hoppe once told me that he greatly regretted that he didn't go in for baseball as a lad rather than billiards. Hoppe always regarded billiards as a business rather than a sport.

Really on game is more dangerous on the hands than baseball, yet Hoppe used to take all kinds of chances when playing exhibitions in a major league city he was usually worked out with one of the teams prior to the start of the game.

Here's Your Decision

WANT STATE VOLLEYBALL TOURNEY HERE IN 1923

Appleton Y. M. C. A. is hopeful of securing the state volleyball championship tournament for this city in 1923, according to R. H. Starkey, physical director. A strong bid has been made to state officials to present the title games here.

This year's tournament was held in Madison. Eau Claire and Fond du Lac both filed requests at that time for the 1923 games but the place was not decided upon.

It is the belief of Mr. Starkey that an increased interest in volleyball among Appleton business men will result if the state tournament is held here. It will demonstrate that skill and speed are required in this game as well as in other sports.

WILLS ALONE HAS CHANCE WITH JACK

Colored Fighter Only Scrapper in World Fit to Battle Champion

By Bob Dorman
New York — Jack Dempsey's European trip promises to be little more than the usual tourist sightseeing trip.

When it is considered that this country has been unable to produce a heavyweight conceding a chance of rising the hard hitting champion any sort of a battle it is hardly likely that Europe can do so.

England has Joe Beckett, Tom Cowper, Gambardier Wells, Albert Lloyd, Frank Goddard and George Cook, all veterans who have seen their best days with the exception of Cook, who does not rank very high, as the fast slipping Beckett stopped him the other night.

France has Carpenter, already defeated by Dempsey, Journeay and Neilles. The last two are jokers.

These three star performers are now riding in the spring meet at Bowie, Md., and are continuing the fine work they did in the south.

Lang is one of the youngest and ablest jockeys on the turf. His work at New Orleans was so brilliant that many bettors were playing Lang and giving only slight consideration to the horse.

IMPROVEMENTS AT LAWRENCE FIELD

Track Being Made Over and Grounds Put in Shape for Spring Season

Workmen, under direction of H. D. McChesney, are putting Lawrence field in shape for the spring athletic season. Extensive improvements are being made on the running track. New curves have been put in at each end which will eliminate the corners that made the oval slow. The curve at the east end of the track has been widened and the oval has been made five lanes wide all the way around. The curves have been banked. New curbers are being put on the track and the oval will be harrowed and rolled. The straightaway has been lengthened to 120 yards.

New jumping and vaulting pits have been put in the field in front of the grand stand. Cinder paths have been laid to the pits for vaulting and broad jumping.

The pentathlon, scheduled to be held Friday of this week has been called off on account of the condition of the track.

BURNS BELIEVES TED LEWIS WILL BEAT FRENCHMAN

Former Heavyweight Champ Says Infighting Will Win for Britisher

London—London is all steamed up over the coming battle between Georges Carpenter and Ted Kid Lewis.

Not only do many of the British fans believe that Lewis is good enough to take the Frenchman, but they are already talking about the prospects of matching the Kid with Jack Dempsey for the world's title.

Lewis is one of the most popular boxers England ever had. Since he won the British welterweight and middle weight championship and knocked out Boy McCormick, the light heavyweight champion in a non-title bout. Londoners have been ready to concede him almost anything in the ring.

One of the most prominent "lights" to allow him a chance with the Frenchman is Tommy Burns, a former world's heavyweight champion, who committed himself recently in the following interview.

"Many sportsmen express the opinion that the Carpenter-Lewis bout is a bad match and the vast weight disparity between the two gives some reason for the belief.

"In Lewis we undoubtedly have the hardest hitting welterweight since

Kid Lavigne and Joe Wolcott. He rips his punches in and what he doesn't know about infight

ing. He showed that in beating Roy

McCormick.

"This is where he has a chance to whip the clever Carpenter. Klawitter
